ABSTRACT

With this instructional guide, teachers of eighth-grade family and consumer sciences courses can help their students create a school-to-work career portfolio and accomplish the following behavioral objectives during the process: demonstrate skills/attitudes essential for job interviews; describe the importance of academic and occupational skills in the workplace; understand the importance of personal skills/attitudes to job success; describe the relationship of personal attitudes, beliefs, abilities, and skills to occupations; demonstrate knowledge of exploratory processes and programs; practice effective group membership skills; identify the applications of academic skills in various occupations; use school and community resources to learn about occupational groups; and identify possible outcomes of decisions. Included in the guide are the following: statement of the philosophy underlying the portfolio project; long-range goals of the school-to-work career portfolio development activity; assessment criteria; activity outline; list of portfolio activities; suggested activities; and suggested activity extensions. Appendixes constituting approximately 90% of this document include the following: detailed instructions for designing a school-to-work career portfolio; sample portfolio covers; interest inventory; skill inventory; sample work permit, job applications, job interview form, and interview thank-you note; learning activities; guide to after-school jobs; and a list of 18 suggested readings. PHILOSOPHY

AS OUR ECONOMY BECOMES MORE SKILLS ORIENTED, WITH ALMOST 80% OF NEW JOBS REQUIRING MORE THAN A HIGH SCHOOL DIPLOMA BUT LESS THAN A FOUR YEAR COLLEGE DEGREE, SMOOTH ENTRY INTO THE WORKPLACE WILL BE MORE DIFFICULT FOR MANY YOUNG ADULTS WHO ARE CURRENTLY COLLEGE BOUND.

LIFETIME EMPLOYMENT IN THE SAME JOB OR WITH THE SAME COMPANY IS NOW THE EXCEPTION RATHER THAN THE RULE. CURRENTLY OUR SCHOOLS ARE NOT SYSTEMATICALLY PREPARING STUDENTS TO ENTER THE WORK FORCE.

THIS INSTRUCTIONAL GUIDE PROVIDES A VEHICLE FOR STUDENTS TO CREATE A SCHOOL-TO-WORK CAREER PORTFOLIO. IT IS WRITTEN SPECIFICALLY FOR STUDENTS IN THE EIGHTH GRADE AND MAY BE CONSTRUCTED WITHOUT ADDED COST TO THE SCHOOL.

PRIOR TO CAREER SELECTION, STUDENTS WILL COMPLETE INTEREST INVENTORIES, EXPLORE A VARIETY OF ENTRY LEVEL AND PROFESSIONAL CAREERS AND ASSESS AND PRIORITIZE JOB VALUE CONSIDERATIONS.

GENERALIZATIONS

- WORK SATISFIES OUR BASIC HUMAN DESIRE TO BE USEFUL AND ACTIVE AT THE SAME TIME GIVING OUR LIVES FOCUS AND MEANING.
- ACCORDING TO 1990 FIGURES IN THE DIGEST OF EDUCATIONAL STATISTICS, ONLY ONE OF EVERY FOUR YOUNG ADULTS FINISHES FOUR YEARS OF COLLEGE
- THE AVERAGE PERSON WILL CHANGE JOBS / CAREERS AT LEAST FIVE TIMES.
- VOLUNTEER WORK AND PART -TIME JOBS PROVIDE HELPFUL EXPERIENCE IN WORKING TOWARDS CAREER GOALS.
- IT IS IMPORTANT TO BEGIN EXPLORING ONES INTERESTS, SKILLS AND APTITUDES AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE TO FACILITATE ATTAINMENT OF CAREER GOALS.
- THE AMOUNT OF EDUCATION AND TRAINING WILL VARY GREATLY FOR A VARIETY OF SPECIFIC JOBS.

LONG-RANGE GOALS

THROUGH THE PORTFOLIO PROCESS, STUDENTS WILL OBTAIN THE FOUNDATION NECESSARY TO FIND AND HOLD A GOOD JOB AND IDENTIFY AND ARTICULATE THEIR OWN OCCUPATIONAL COMPETENCIES AND CAREER GOALS. STUDENTS WILL BE ABLE TO:

- DEMONSTRATE SKILLS AND ATTITUDES ESSENTIAL FOR A JOB INTERVIEW.
- DESCRIBE THE IMPORTANCE OF ACADEMIC AND OCCUPATIONAL SKILLS IN THE WORK WORLD.
- DEMONSTRATE AN UNDERSTANDING OF THE IMPORTANCE OF PERSONAL SKILLS AND ATTITUDES TO JOB SUCCESS.
- DESCRIBE THE RELATIONSHIP OF PERSONAL ATTITUDES, BELIEFS, ABILITIES AND SKILLS TO OCCUPATIONS.
- DEMONSTRATE KNOWLEDGE OF EXPLORATORY PROCESSES AND PROGRAMS.
- PRACTICE EFFECTIVE GROUP MEMBERSHIP SKILLS.
- IDENTIFY HOW THE SKILLS TAUGHT IN SCHOOL SUBJECTS ARE USED IN VARIOUS OCCUPATIONS.
- USE SCHOOL AND COMMUNITY RESOURCES TO LEARN ABOUT OCCUPATIONAL GROUPS.
- IDENTIFY POSSIBLE OUTCOMES OF DECISIONS.

ASSESSMENT

COMPLETED PORTFOLIOS ARE ASSESSED ON THE FOLLOWING CRITERIA:

- | | |
|----------------------------|-----------------------|
| *ACCURACY OF INFORMATION | *KNOWLEDGE OF CONTENT |
| *COMPLETENESS | *ORIGINALITY |
| *CREATIVITY | *SELF ASSESSMENT |
| *FOLLOWING DIRECTIONS | *VISUAL APPEAL |
| *EVIDENCE OF UNDERSTANDING | *NEATNESS |

60-Second Infomercial

The world of work requires excellent listening and speaking skills. Speaking verbally communicates your feelings, desires and ideas. Can you persuade through words? Is it easier for you to speak to one individual or to a group? One way to prepare for interactions with employers is to develop a 60-second infomercial. The infomercial explains your skills using examples of your accomplishments.

Examples:

"I can meet deadlines. I have my own checking account and pay all my bills on time. I also pass in my school assignments before the deadline date."

"I enjoy explaining directions to others. In my volunteer job, I train new volunteers to use our computer system."

When delivering your personalized 60-second infomercial, you should be yourself - friendly, interested and well-rehearsed.

It is beneficial to know yourself.

Know what you want.

Know what you are good at.

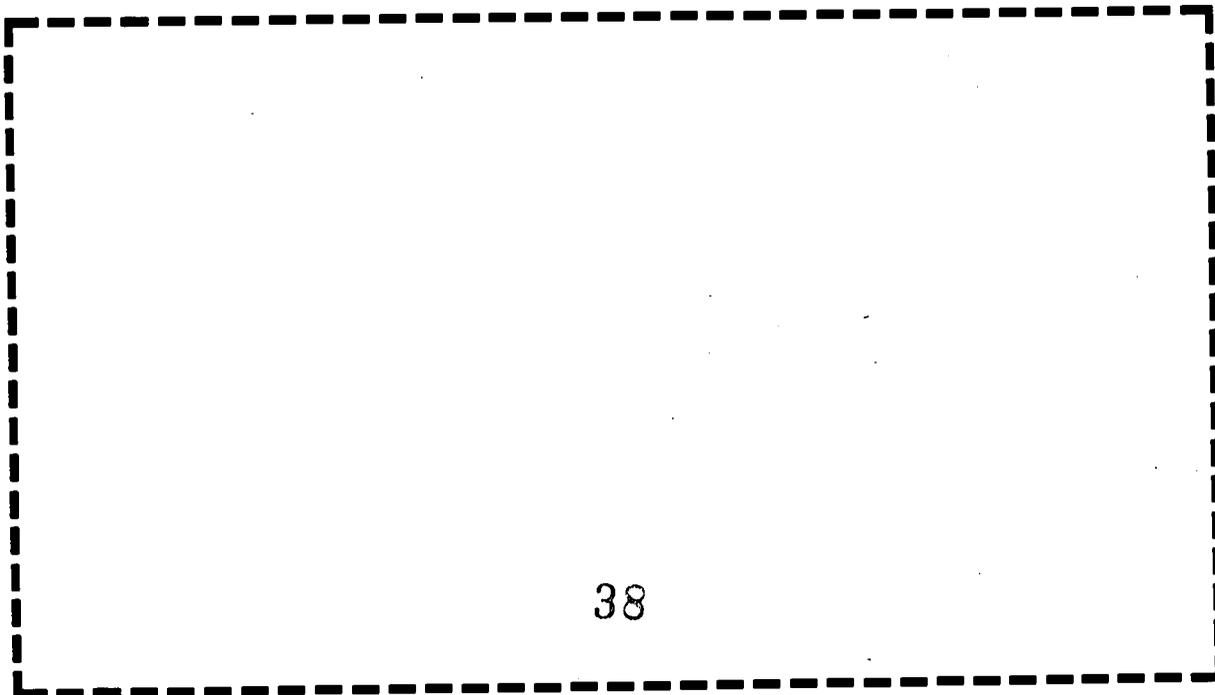

Know what this person can do to help you.

60-Second Infomercial

When you speak with a "potential contact" you should:

- Introduce yourself
- Tell the person about yourself
- Mention your contact person (if you have one)
- Speak briefly about your:
 - Education
 - Skills
 - Specialty
 - Work history
- Mention one or two accomplishment statements
- Explain your goal/purpose

In the space provided here, please write out your "60-second Infomercial"

 JOB GUIDE
 by Jennifer Perillo

Every week, more than five million teenagers go to work. Some of them do it just for the paycheck. Others do it for the new friends they can make and the skills they can learn. Still others do it because they really enjoy what they do.

On the following pages, teens at the most popular after-school workplaces — from the ultra-cool Gap to the ubiquitous McDonald's — tell the truth about their jobs. Whether you're thinking about getting a job, improving your job, or quitting your job in disgust, our findings will help you make your next move.

Food for the Brain

WORKING IN A BOOKSTORE

About a hundred customers are strolling through the block-long Barnes & Noble superstore on 82nd Street in New York City. Some lounge upstairs, a librarylike area with sofas and window seats; others read while sipping cappuccino at the store's small café.

Employees are occupied at cash registers, on the selling floor, and at computer terminals. The store is calm, because this is a quiet shift. At busy times (evenings, weekends, and during author book signings), all 12 cashiers have lines of customers that snake around the aisles, sometimes ending up against the store's far wall.

B&N offers two positions for part-time workers: cashier and bookseller. Most employees, like Josh Bernstein, 17, start out as cashiers. As cashiers gain experience and book knowledge, they can become booksellers. Bookseller Carlos Sanchez, 20, roams his assigned aisles answering customer questions and using the store's computer system to locate books. He also unpacks books and helps clean up at closing time.

THE PERKS

According to Carlos, the store is "a total social hot spot." At closing time on Friday and Saturday nights, customers actually have to be forced out. Celebrity shoppers add to the social scene: Jerry Seinfeld, Michael Douglas, and Jimmy Carter have all been sighted in the store. There are financial perks, too. Employees get a 30 percent discount on books.

THE DRAWBACKS

The 82nd Street store has two modes: dead calm or hyperspeed. When things get fast, booksellers have to handle many customers at once. "I don't get stressed out, because I'm really laid back," Carlos says.

For cashiers, slow times are the worst. "We can't read while we are standing behind the counter and there are no customers around," says Josh. "We can't slouch, either."

THE SCHEDULE

According to assistant store manager Randy Losapio, the company doesn't require employees to have to work a minimum number of hours a week, and they can take time off if they find someone else to cover their hours.

THE PAYCHECK

Carlos started working at $6 an hour. "The pay is pretty competitive," he says, "Not just the minimum wage."

THE FAST TRACK

Teens can move up from cashiers to booksellers if they are knowledgeable about books.

THE IDEAL APPLICANT

When hiring part-time workers, Losapio looks for dependability. He also wants applicants who "intuitively know how to deal with customers."

THE RÉSUMÉ FACTOR

Working in a bookstore exposes you to the whole world of written knowledge. Play this up on your résumé and in interviews by sharing what you learned and discovered.

Making the Most of a Boring Job

Most of the working teens we spoke to admitted that their jobs weren't exactly challenging. The truth is that the kinds of jobs that are likely to go to teens — in supermarkets, restaurants, and stores — are characterized by lots of repetition and not much creativity. Burnout, for many teens, can set in within a few weeks. But according to Bryna Shore Fraser of the National Institute of Work and Learning, there are ways to make even the most tedious job more interesting.

By showing extra initiative, you can work your way into new responsibilities or even a promotion. You'll also gain glowing employer references for college applications and new jobs, not to mention solid work habits that will last a lifetime.

Here are some specific tips for making the most of your job:

- Ask regularly for your supervisor's opinion about the quality of your work. Don't worry about

WORKING IN A SUPERMARKET

A steady stream of customers are shopping at the Festival Foods supermarket in Lebanon, Pennsylvania. Moms with little kids in tow choose chocolate cake mix for cupcakes; a shopper with a file full of coupons and a mile-long list turns grocery shopping into a personal quest.

Everywhere you look there are employees — stacking apples in the produce aisle, slicing pastrami at the deli counter, mopping up a jar of applesauce that fell in Aisle 4. Business is brisk, and there's always plenty to do.

New part-time workers at Festival can be cashiers or grocery clerks, who bag groceries and do light stock work. That's how Mike McCook, 17, started out three years ago. Now he's a cashier trainer, and he teaches cashiering to new employees.

Heather Collins, 18, was hired as a cashier six months ago; now she's a customer sales rep. That involves keeping an eye on the checkout lines, running the store's courtesy booth, and handling customer complaints.

Heather likes working with her friends: She found a date for the homecoming dance among her coworkers.

Weekend wages are another plus. A teen employee from a different supermarket mentioned pay as high as $11 an hour for Sundays and holidays.

THE DRAWBACKS

Work gets hectic before holidays, or whenever the word snow appears in the weather forecast.

And because cashiers handle large amounts of money, they constantly have supervisors looking over their shoulders and counting the money in their registers.

THE SCHEDULE

One of the best things about the job, says Mike, is the flexible schedule. "They work around my school schedule," he explains.

THE PAYCHECK

Mike started out at minimum wage; now he earns $6 an hour.

He's stashing money away for college. Heather makes a little over $5 an hour.

THE FAST TRACK

Like Heather and Mike, teens who start out as cashiers or grocery clerks can move on to management positions like customer sales representative or cashier trainer.

THE IDEAL APPLICANT

Roger Hensil, the store manager, looks for students who are involved in after-school activities. "That shows they can manage time well, which is crucial when you're juggling school and a job," he says.

He adds that previous experience is important too, even if it's just baby-sitting or lawn mowing.

THE RÉSUMÉ FACTOR

Supermarkets are among the most sophisticated marketers of merchandise. Pay attention to how they introduce new products, advertise sales, and deal with customer complaints. Talk about what you observed in college interviews and even mention it on your résumé.

seeming too eager. Be open to both compliments and criticism.

• Volunteer to do tasks that are outside your normal list of duties.

• Talk to coworkers about their jobs, especially those in management positions. By showing interest, you will learn more about your workplace and may be given something new to do.

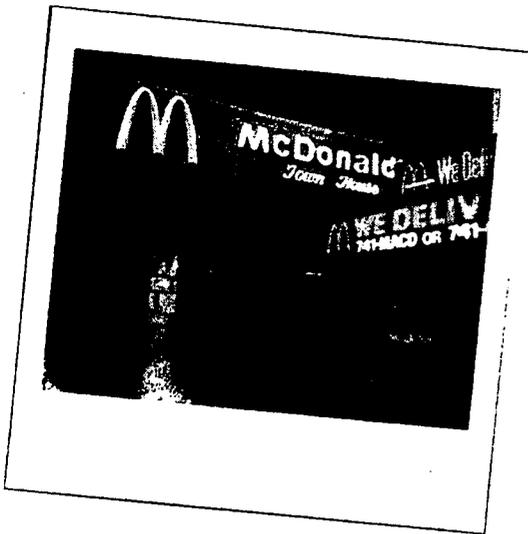

• Closely observe your workplace from a customer's point of view. Can you think of ways to make it more efficient or pleasant? Offer your suggestions to your supervisor.

• Talk to company higher-ups (i.e., your supervisor's supervisor) if you can. They can give you information about the bigger company picture.

• Finally, remember there's no shame in deciding that a job is not for you. If you're having a miserable time, don't worry about looking like a quitter — just take the things you've learned from your job and move on to another one.

Lord of the Fries

WORKING AT MCDONALD'S

At 6 p.m. on a Thursday night, it seems like all of New York City's Greenwich Village is in McDonald's: elderly people eating slowly, businessmen grabbing a bite after work, families with delighted children, teens giggling in groups.

Four cashiers hustle to take customer orders and keep the long lines moving. Behind the grills, the 10-person crew is working as closely and tightly controlled as a sports team; with these crowds, they can't afford to fall behind.

Nearly all McDonald's employees, like Godfrey Tsui, 17, who works at a Long Island McDonald's, start as crew. Crew people work "the front" as cashiers and drive-through clerks; "the back" preparing food; and "the lobby" cleaning the dining area. In the back, each worker is assigned a particular task: One makes burgers, another makes chicken sandwiches, etc.

The pace is fast, and the grill area quickly gets hot and greasy; still, most employees are joking with each other and seem to be having a good time.

THE PERKS

For Godfrey, being with other teens is a big social advantage. "We talk a lot, and we hang out after work. It's hard to find a job where you have friends and you have a good time," he says.

Workers also get free meals, another plus — at least for a while. "I'm so sick of the food," Godfrey complains.

THE DRAWBACKS

During the dinner shift (5 to 7 p.m. every night) the restaurant gets hectic. Sometimes the tension leads to arguments with frantic supervisors and irate, hungry customers.

The uniform is a pain too: red-and-white striped shirt, tie for men, pants, shoes, and hat. "I'm really into my hair, and the hat bothers me," Godfrey says.

THE SCHEDULE

"Scheduling is great," Godfrey says. "You work whenever you want." When basketball season started, he worked only on Saturdays.

THE PAYCHECK

Most start at $4.85 and get a raise every six months.

THE FAST TRACK

Godfrey says that by showing leadership qualities — for example, by cleaning up whenever there is extra time — crew workers can become crew chiefs.

THE IDEAL APPLICANT

Malesia Webb-Dunn of McDonald's media relations describes the ideal applicant as "reliable, smart, hard-working, courteous, clean, team-oriented, and respectful of authority."

THE RÉSUMÉ FACTOR

You're not just flipping burgers. You're participating in perhaps the most successful business venture in history. Pay attention to how McDonald's does it and be ready to talk about it in interviews. Also, it will reflect very well on your work habits if you can move up even one notch.

Before You Take That Job...

Many teenagers (and adults, too) think of job interviews and applications as entirely one-sided. The employer asks all the questions, the applicant gives all the answers.

That doesn't have to be the case. Just as an employer uses the application process to judge you, you can use the process to judge the employer. Before and during the job interview, check out the workplace and ask questions about what will be expected of you.

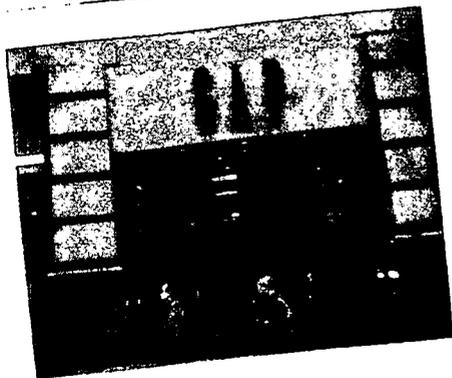

Don't think that investigating a possible job will mark you as a troublemaker. If your potential employers are worthy of you, they'll be impressed at how seriously you take your responsibilities.

Bryna Shore Fraser of the National Institute of Work and Learning suggests that you take the following steps before saying yes to an after-school job:

- Visit your potential workplace at the times you plan on working there. Learn in advance whether the pace is stressful or sedate.

Jeans in Your Genes

WORKING AT THE GAP

Business is fairly quiet at a Gap store in downtown New York City on a Tuesday night. In this particular store, the fashions on display are muted: prim plaid skirts, the basic Gap V-neck sweaters in deep colors, row after row of jeans. Nearly everything looks classic and comfortable, and it's easy to see why Americans — especially American teens — buy about $2.52 billion worth of Gap merchandise every year.

Several employees stand around, fluffing up sweaters and straightening out piles of jeans. Some are casually but neatly dressed, others flaunt the latest in grunge wear. The cashiers chat with each other when there are no customers around.

Part-time workers at the Gap are generally chosen for one of three positions: cashier, salesperson, or stock person, who works exclusively in the stock room. Employees may rotate between different jobs, but they rarely do.

THE PERKS

By far the best thing about working at the Gap is the store discount: 30 percent off anything you buy. If something you bought goes on sale within 30 days, you'll even receive a check for the difference.

THE DRAWBACKS

The work can be monotonous: If you work on the floor, you spend much of your time folding and refolding sweaters upset by burrowing customers. When the store is busy, employees shift into overdrive: Customers become less patient as the register lines grow longer.

THE SCHEDULE

Most Gap stores are fairly flexible about scheduling: "They'll schedule around you," says one employee. Work shifts can last anywhere from four to eight hours.

THE PAYCHECK

Employees start at around $5 an hour, which is standard-to-low for retail. But if you like the clothes, you can save significantly on your wardrobe and gifts for your friends and family.

THE FAST TRACK

Part-timers are pretty much stuck working the floor, behind the register, and in the stock room. But after graduation, if you want to work full-time, you could move on to the managerial track. Many Gap store managers are in their early 20s.

THE IDEAL APPLICANT

Like most retail chains, the Gap looks for people who are reliable, cheerful, and don't mind tucking in their shirts on the job.

THE RÉSUMÉ FACTOR

The Gap is one of the most powerful style-setters in America. Try to learn something about how they make their design decisions. Be attentive to their advertising campaigns and how they translate into business for the stores. Discussing these observations in job interviews and even a college essay will showcase your keen business mind.

- Talk to other employees about the job, your supervisor, and the workplace. Only they will know what it's really like to work there.
- Find out about your schedule during the interview. How many hours will you be expected to work? Is the management sensitive to the needs of students? Know if you will be responsible for working long or late hours, and if so, if you will get paid overtime for them.
- Ask about the company policy on schedule changes. How easy is it to take time off for schoolwork or extracurricular activities?
- Write down your questions and bring them with you to the interview so you don't forget what you want to ask. The interviewer will see that as a sign of your superior preparation and organizational skills.

JOB APPLICATIONS

KEY CONCEPT

Usually the company will ask you to complete an application form when you arrive for the interview. The obvious reason for doing so is to learn additional information about your experience, education and references. Other reasons are more subtle--not so obvious. It is a good way for the company to see if your handwriting is neat and legible. Did you come prepared with all the information you needed to fill out the application, like addresses and phone numbers of your references or dates of employment at your other jobs? They also will notice how long it takes you to fill out the application. You don't want to be too fast--that shows you might always be in a hurry and overlook important items. You also don't want to be too slow--that shows that you may not be efficient.

EXPLANATION

The application form is usually just one side (although it could be two). Use a pen. Make sure you bring all the information with you. It is also important to be truthful on the application form.

Answer every question. If there is a question that does not apply (like Branch of the Military Service), write in N/A for not applicable. That shows that you did not overlook the question; it simply does not apply.

Notice in the example on the next page that all areas are completed. Notice too that the information is neat and legible. If you receive the application before the interview, you should type it.

Some application forms will ask why you left a job. It's important that you fill that in. Appropriate answers include

- better opportunity
- moved away from area
- hours conflicted with school

The following are examples of poor reasons

- fought with the boss
- couldn't get to work on time
- was fired

If you were fired from the job, write the word dismissed rather than fired. Be prepared to tell the interviewer why you were fired. Use this as an opportunity to make points. If you were fired because you were late to work too many times, tell the interviewer that you have learned from this mistake and are now able to get to work on time.

The references that you list on the application form should be people who will make positive comments about you. You want individuals who can talk about your skills and personal work ethic. Former employers, teachers, counselors or friends of your parents are good choices.

EXERCISE

Complete the blank application form. Use ink. You decide what type of job you are looking for. If you think that you have never had a job before, consider listing any volunteer work that you have done. You can also list any child care work. (Baby sitting is not a good word--child care is better.)

When it is all done, check it carefully for accuracy and completeness.
REMEMBER TO SIGN IT.

KEY CONCEPT

An interview is a time that the prospective employer gets to find out information about you. It's also a time for you to find out information about the job. Remember, just because you got the interview doesn't mean you have to accept the job. Interviews are a time for both of you to ask questions. The interviewer will probably ask most of the questions first. After you've answered all of that person's questions, it will be time for you to ask questions.

EXPLANATION

The interviewer will probably have several standard questions he or she will ask you. Go in prepared with answers for all the following questions. If your answer is negative in any way, turn it into a positive. For instance, if the interviewer says their company is looking for someone with more experience, remind them that you are eager to learn and will quickly perform to their expectations.

Interviewers will often ask you to discuss your strengths. Remember you are selling your skills so this is not the time to be too modest. State your skills in a matter-of-fact style, stressing your strongest abilities. The interviewer may also ask you to discuss your weaknesses. Be honest, but remember to turn it into a positive statement.

EXERCISE

Write out answers to all the following questions. Some will take some thought. You may want to change some answers the next day. This is not unusual. Remember to be honest and direct.

QUESTIONS MOST FREQUENTLY ASKED AT AN INTERVIEW:

DIRECTIONS: USING COMPLETE SENTENCES, ANSWER AS HONESTLY AS POSSIBLE.

1. Tell me about yourself.
2. Why are you applying for this position?
3. Do you prefer working with others or by yourself?

5. What are your weaknesses?
6. Which school courses do you enjoy the most? Why?
7. Why did you leave your last job?
8. What do you see yourself doing five years from now?
9. Why should we hire you for this job?
